How long does it take doordash to do background check

Enrollment at work as a food delivery driver is a great way to earn extra money on a flexible program. I recently joined to be a DoorDash driver and tried the service itself to see exactly what the process looks like. In this article, I will take a closer look at being a driver with DoorDash, including how to start, how much you can expect to do and how to use some tips I have learned to maximize your earnings. 4 Things To Know Before Become a DoorDash driver If you have a car with updated insurance, a working smartphone and a clear background check, you can earn money driving with DoorDash. Similar to GrubHub, UberEats and other food delivery services, DoorDash hires freelance to complete deliveries in return for pay for delivery and customer advice. Last year, I signed up to be a DoorDash driver in Lexington, Kentucky, like a way to earn extra money. So far, I've done $1,112.78. Below, share what I learned to drive for DoorDash. Before you start, consider these four things to know about the DoorDash guide. DoorDash is a food delivery service that allows customers to order from nearby restaurants and some grocery stores. Once a customer puts an order, the nearest DoorDash driver is advised to take it and deliver it. There are two different applications for DoorDash: the food delivery app for customers (iOS and Android) and the driver app for freelancers (iOS and Android). Both applications are free to download and accounts are free to create. OfIf you are interested in becoming a driver for DoorDash, you will need the driver app. DoorDash is available in over 850 cities across North America. To see if it is available in your area before registering, enter your online address. How much does DoorDash drivers cost? As a DoorDash driver, you are able to choose when and how often you work. Due to extreme flexibility, the gains vary considerably between one DoorDash driver and another. How much you can do also depends on where you are delivering and what daytime you are working on. I tried to take turns during lunch, dinner and weekends. In my experience, you can expect to earn anywhere from 10 $25 hourly. Over a month in 2020, I gained an average of $183.51 weekly working on an average of 9 hours and 15 minutes. That means I did about $19.84 an hour. Below, you can see a breakdown of earnings from one of those weeks. DoorDash pay includes basic pay for delivery plus any Peak Pay. All deliveries include a minimum payment amount (basic package) which is typically between 2-$3. Peak Pay is available during business periods and adds 1-$5 for delivery. You can find out when Peak Pay timeslots are available by clicking the Promos tab in the app. In that same tab Promos, you can also see if there are "challenges" available. A challenge can say something like "Add an extra $20 when you complete 15 deliveries this week." If you complete a challenge, the incentive money will be've been in your next salary. In addition to the doordash pay, customer advice is also added to earnings. doordash drivers can keep 100% of customer advice, of course, there are expenses that come with the work including the oura on your car and gas. according to the annual summary I received from doordash at the end of 2020, while I gained $1,112.78, I had driven about 572 miles. If my car gets 25 mpg and the gas costs about $2.50 per gallon, this is already a $57.20 expense. Besides, as a freelance doordash driver, you will also need to keep your taxes out. also considering these expenses, you can still make $10-$20 hourly. drive during peak pay times. when you open the app, you can click on "Promos" in the top left corner to see if peak pay times are available. I usually see peak pay promotions during lunch, dinner and weekends. if you can sign up to drive during one of those time periods, you will get an extra $1-$5 for delivery. you can also get notifications during the day that makes you know that peak pay is available. Likewise, make sure you check the active challenges and complete the eligible deliveries for additional gains. Go to hotspots if you're waiting for orders. When you drive, you will see hotspots on the map. These are areas where many orders are underway. If you are waiting for orders, hang out near these restaurants to maximize the chances of getting an assignment. be strategicorders you accept. Before accepting or rejecting an order, you will be able to see the total minimum payment that you will get - including customer advice. You will also see the total distance you will have to drive. If an order is too far or too small, it is OK to turn it off. Your acceptance vote may come down, but this will not affect your ability to accept orders. In addition, you can accept multiple orders simultaneously. DoorDash will offer you multiple orders only if your destinations are in the same direction. This is a great way to double what you earn and drive only slightly further. Keep in mind that your earnings vary from now to now depending on where you live, when you are driving and if customers leave a tip. How does DoorDash work? DoorDash works by connecting customers with freelance drivers and nearby restaurants and traders. As a driver, you expect to use your smartphone and vehicle to accept and deliver orders. You will earn the basic payment for each delivery, Peak Pay when eligible and 100% of the tips that customers leave. You can also get additional incentives by completing active challenges.
